The Personal Data Protection Act 2010 & How it Affects Your Organisation

Live Panel Discussion

Organisations often fail to put personal data protection considerations at the forefront when it comes to governance and business decision-making, resulting in personal data processing procedures and activities that fall foul or short of what is required under the law. It is therefore of utmost importance that organisations understand their obligations under the Personal Data Protection Act 2010 and how compliance with the personal data protection principles should be a vital consideration in their day-to-day operations.

In this session, lawyers from LHAG's leading Technology, Media & Telecommunications team will share their thoughts on how the Personal Data Protection Act 2010 affects the various aspects of an organisation. The issues that will be discussed include:

- Personal data protection principles
- Employees' personal data
- Overseas transfer of personal data
- Data breaches
- Exemptions under the PDPA

Who should sign up?

- Data protection officers
- Directors /Heads of Department /Corporate /Consultants
- In-house Legal Counsel
